[Student Grievances and Appeals Policy]

Purpose

The purposes of the Student Grievances and Appeals Policy are to establish the right of students to appeal decisions that affect them and that they believe are wrong and to establish a foundation for procedures related to filing and acting on student grievances and appeals.

Audience

This policy applies to all students at Yorkville University.

Definitions

This policy includes no definitions.

Policy Statement

Where there are grounds for doing so, students have the right to appeal any decision by any faculty member, committee, or administrator at the University/School. Decisions that are appealable might be made under any one of a number of University/School policies, including, but not limited to, those policies governing harassment and discrimination, anti-violence, credit transfer, leaves of absence, advanced standing, withdrawal from a course or program, grading, academic integrity and honesty, professional suitability and ethics, academic standing (including probation), and academic dismissal. Because appeals can come only from students, decisions relating to admission to academic programs are not appealable.
